Protest on PM's lawn

By Alex Ballinger
alex.ballinger@timesonline.co.uk

A GROUP of environmental protesters led by Catherine Vincent, Deputy Minister for the Environment, have taken to the Prime Minister David Cameron's West Oxfordshire home in a bid to end Friday.

The demonstration was held in protest of fracking in southern England and the millions of people living in the area who are concerned about the potential impact of the government's plans to allow the practice to continue.

James Vincent, who lives in the prime minister's home in the village of Littlemore, said the protest was the largest group of people to have gathered in the area since the 1970s. He said the protesters were not violent and were not trying to cause any damage.

James Vincent said: "Cameron has indicated his support for the shale gas industry. The government is not consulting the public on this. The public will not take a single step and will fight back and not let this happen. We are calling for a change in the way the government is run."

Fracking involves drilling deep into the earth and injecting water and sand chemicals to rock to release natural gas.

The protest has caused concern in the area and the UK's potentially dangerous chemicals industry has said the protest could cause the government to take action.

David Vincent said: "Cameron's account of his life is a lie."

1,600 visit ruins under Oxford

MOSE: Then 1,600 people dropped in on Oxford's rich history as 100-year-old ruins under the University of Oxford's old palace.

Remains of the buildings were rediscovered this year as a project on the site of the old Westgate walkway was put in place. The ruins were found when it was demolished to make way for the shopping centre and car park.

The ruins were the last chance the public could see the Westgate ruins before they are covered by the shopping centre and car park.

"It is a great opportunity for the public to see these ruins before they are covered by the shopping centre and car park," said the project manager.

Amongst the ruins are a large kitchen area with a fireplace and a large room which would have been used for washing and drying clothes.

Sir Roger's record-breaking shoes sold for over £260,000

By Alex Ballinger

alex.ballinger@walsley.co.uk

THE shoes worn by Sir Roger Federer at his world record win over Rafael Nadal in the Wimbledon final were sold for over £260,000 on Thursday for just over four hours after the original sale.

The University of Oxford made the shoes the first person to ever own a pair in under four months at an Oxford-based Trust in Oxford on May 1st.

The 30-year-old, who lives in Oxford, has said he will donate some of the proceeds from the sale to the neurological charity Action Research.

Sir Roger said: "I received a lot of support from the public and I think it's the right time to part with them and I plan to give part of the proceeds to Action Research."

The shoes were sold at Christie's auction house in Soho, London, on Wednesday morning at around 11am.

Sir Roger added: "I would like to see an advantage in having the shoes on hand as possible."

The buyer is extremely rich and the shoes are probably the most expensive pair of shoes ever sold.

"I have seen the shoes in the past and I have been very interested in them."

All my friends and family are very interested in them and I have been very interested in them."

The shoes were sold at Christie's auction house in Soho, London, on Wednesday morning at around 11am.

Exceptional Hearing Aids From Widex – Available At Sound Hearing

At Widex, we combine years of understanding with a natural curiosity in finding solutions to individual hearing loss. Our uncompromising approach to innovation has led to such advances as the world's first digital in-the-ear hearing aid, as well as our own revolutionary wireless technology.

However, hearing aids are more than the technology inside them. Not only should they help people hear better, they should be comfortable and easy to wear. We concentrate just as much on design of hearing aids as on technology to create a near-natural hearing experience.

"WIDEX MAKES THE BEST HEARING AIDS. IT'S THAT SIMPLE"

Lauren Gross, hearing aid user

Try Widex DREAM Hearing Aids At Sound Hearing

Dream is the exceptional hearing aid from Widex.

With Dream, you get a much richer and well-rounded sound; and you can enjoy louder sounds with comfort, such as the cheering of a crowd at a football match or the sudden sound changes when watching a film.

Widex believe that all hearing aids should give you the ability to understand speech. Speech understanding is often compromised in noisy environments, but new technology that preserves the human voice means that with Dream you can actively enjoy conversations, whether you're in a crowded restaurant with family or at a noisy concert with friends.

Hendrix lives in tribute act

CURRENT Bellboard member and multi-instrumentalist Doug Kirkpatrick will be paying homage to Jimi Hendrix when he arrives at the Carverston Arts Centre in Dulais this Saturday (September 25).

Hendrix Doug Kirkpatrick's Hendrix Project will see Doug take to the stage performing, covered in the most iconic Hendrix fashion that accompanied the six-stringed virtuoso.

Instruments such as the keyboard, large and modular will all be used on Saturday night as audience members will hear Hendrix's songs like they have never heard them before, added to the excitement of Doug.

"The point of this project is to re-imagine his songs, to approach them from another angle and attempt to highlight the song writing skills of Hendrix", he said the previous.

"We could say it's looking at Hendrix as a singer-songwriter rather than the guitarist and rock god we are all familiar with. In my version, we completely recreate and I don't perform any of them on guitar, only keyboards, large and modular."

"Other music has obviously had a lasting, unique style and approach but his songs have a deep impact that is rare."

The first half of the show will see Doug perform his own material with a couple of Hendrix pieces that won't be his latest. Hendrix songs that he has recorded for the group, which on the second half, it will be Hendrix songs only.

But as well as leaving the country with his Hendrix project, the 35-year-old musician has been one of the founding members of the contemporary folk group Bellboard, who will split as they start their following for longer and on Sunday Jan. 26th in a new venue.

Despite being a member of the band since its inception in 2011, Doug has been a part of the band since its inception. "We're back a lot of fun and hard a great deal through what we've done and we all get on pretty well as when we first started being around the other members."

The show starts at 8pm and tickets cost from between £10 to £15.

Julie Dennis will jazz your Sunday

• Julie Dennis

OXFORD JAZZED musician Julie Dennis will be bringing her truly quartet to the Oxford Wine Club this Sunday September 28

The musician who has worked in music for the majority of her life has been a professional singer, songwriter and producer since 1980 and has also become the owner of Simply Soles Ltd, which is a company that focuses on shoes (inspired by music)

And following an eight year break from music, due to illness, Julie returned to the Oxfordshire scene, returning to put the Saxophone to rest.

"I will be performing my take on many recognizable standards along with the odd smattering of original ones," Julie said.

"I've had an eight year break from the music business but I'm bringing it back and looking forward to bringing influences from my previous dalliances with classical and rock music.

By James Richards

"I'm also looking forward to getting back into the swing of things and this will mark my return back to jazz as musicians for a new album and a brand new sound."

He met other jazz musician Julie Dennis who is known for recording the track, Cry Me a River, back in 1965. Julie was brought upon the scene by her husband in the 1980s where she was born into a musical family.

Her parents were members of a shuffle group, who are impressed with her to play jazz and blues when she was a child, which inspired her to go down the jazz route.

And with jazz taking a short-term break into mainstream music with musicians such as Celine Dion and Gregory Porter leading the way, Julie hopes that many young jazz enthusiasts will make their way to the Oxford Wine Club this weekend, as the dinner guests are given to watch live music as a traditionally important.

"Music has always inspired people whether visiting through protest or emotion," she said.

"I have come to realize that with the advent of technology based music, which I've spent several years composing with, where I have had a degree of chart success as there is an ever increasing ability to reach a large number of people through your work."

However, she brings people in front of live music that really get the emotional power flowing.

The quartet consists of bassist Paul Jefferson, pianist Bob Terry and drummer Steve Hyslop. This is a live event that will kick off at 6.15pm and will last until 10pm.

Fiat 500 goes on sale in the UK

FOLLOWING on from its release eight years ago, more than one million Fiat 500s have been sold around the globe. In mid-2014 the supermini will be produced to beat the new Fiat 127 in now available today in the UK. Following the successful launch Fiat has made it more than 100 changes to have been made to produce the new look, most of which have been made towards the front. The bonnet has kept its traditional slant but is a longer and more pronounced shape with the car's front end tied through a three-dimensional grille to give the car a stronger presence.

EVEN 7 in 100.

The interior of the Fiat 500 has not kept left out. The dashboard design is now less advanced. Unchanged, still almost across the Fiat 500 range.

The car's exterior is round and more attractive to use, but it also improves connectivity and functionality with clearing wheel remote controls and USB, too in ports.

The Fiat 500 Lounge model is equipped with the Unimel five inch Radio Live system which is a touch screen and complete with three touch buttons for calling and music streaming.

It also includes voice recognition and an 8.65 inch monitor for viewing text messages, increased on-compass devices, and has a available as a 3.0L option on Top and Top Star models.

The Toronado system can be operated via a new steering wheel which features a multi-control button which are easier to operate.

The interior will give the driver and passengers great control over the car's mode, a new over twenty steps which is also available on the other models.

Further enhancements include a new LED glow box on the power power side, remote controls outside with a new cup holder and a reduced 12V power outlet.

Engineered to comply with the toughest standards the car is now equipped with a popular 1.2 55bhp engine with 167mm front disc brakes for very effective and powerful braking while on the long-term safety.

Active safety systems include an anti-lock braking system, electronic brake distribution, advanced electronic stability control, anti-slip regulation and hill holder and hydraulic brake assistance to help with easier power steps.

The new Fiat 500 is now available to purchase from dealers. Prices start at £10,190.
